THE question of the car shops has been hanging now for about three months. The time has come when a decision will be made and something must be done if the prize is won. Its up to us, and the events of the next few days will show whether the Richmond people desire to have the business interests of the town advanced, or whether the people of the town will sit down and let others take that which can be gotten with a little effort. The Louisville & Atlantic Railroad has stated that the machines will be located here provided the city exempt the plant from taxation, lay a water main and donate the site. The first two conditions have already been complied with. All that stands in the way is the last. The railroad has chosen, for the plant, the lot lying on the south side of the railroad, between Second and Third Streets. The price of this lot is fixed at $3,000. Then it is reduced to this, that if $3,000 can be raised in the city of Richmond, the car shops will be brought here. Will it be worth the money? It certainly will bring much more than that in return. The railroad will first erect buildings at the cost of several thousand dollars, furnishing work for our mechanics. When the shops are opened a number of men with families will be brought here, who will need houses. This will increase the demand for houses and mean money for those who have houses to rent. These men will get good wages, and all their money will be spent here, and every line of business represented in the town will reap the benefit. And this will not be for a year or for two years, but will go on as long as time lasts. And then this move will eventually make this town the head of the railroad, and if the road is ever finished through the mountains, as it probably will some day be, it will make this plant much larger. At any cost it would prove a paying investment to the city. And not only shall we, but those who come after us will reap the benefit of our purchase. Any town North of the river would jump at such an opportunity as we now have. Lexington gave the land and $25,000 in cash for the shops of the Lexington & Eastern, a shorter and less important road than ours. The question is not can we afford it, but can we afford to lose it.

REAR ADMIRAL SCHLEY

has filed his objections to the majority opinion of the Court of Inquiry with Secretary Long. He asks that the findings of the Court be not approved and that the opinion be committed to the Court again. He asks, further, that his counsel be allowed to make oral argument to the Secretary against the protest which will be filed by Rear Admiral Sampson's attorneys, against the clause in the dissenting opinion of Admiral Dewey. It will be remembered that Admiral Dewey said that the glory of the Santiago sea battle belonged to Schley and the men under him.
